Week 2 · The R.O.O.T.E.D. Model

Last week you looked at how God made you. This week you receive the tool you will use for the rest of your life. The R.O.O.T.E.D. Model is not a theory to admire -- it is a practice that physically reshapes how you think, and therefore how you live. By the end of this week you should be able to walk yourself through all six letters without looking at a page.

WHY THIS CHANGES EVERYTHING

Here is what most people never learn: the thing that happened to you is not what creates your life. What you make it mean does. The fact is neutral. The meaning you attach to it produces the feeling. The feeling drives what you do. And what you do -- repeated over years -- becomes your actual life. This is why two women can face the same hard morning and end up in two different lives. Not because the morning was different. Because what they made it mean was different.

THE FACT	WHAT I MAKE IT MEAN	WHAT IT PRODUCES	WHAT I DO	MY LIFE
R Reality	O Origin	O Overflow	E Election	D Dwelling

T -- Turning sits between Overflow and Election. It is the hinge. It is where freedom lives.

+ "Do not be conformed to this world, but be transformed by the renewing of your mind." -- Romans 12:2

YOUR BRAIN IS NOT FIXED

St. Paul wrote "be transformed by the renewing of your mind" two thousand years before anyone could image a brain. He was right. Every thought you think repeatedly wears a groove -- a physical pathway. The thoughts you have practiced for twenty years are highways. The true thought you are trying to believe is a footpath through tall grass. This is why choosing the truth feels hard and false at first: you are not lying to yourself, you are walking a path that is not worn yet. Walk it enough and it becomes the road. That is not self-help. That is how God built you -- and it is why He asks for daily practice rather than a single decision.

WEEK 2 O -- Origin

+ "Take every thought captive to obey Christ." -- 2 Corinthians 10:5

Origin asks: where did this come from? Not to assign blame -- to find the root. Every strong reaction you have is fed by something older than the moment. A wound. A belief formed at seven. A temperament tendency. When you can name the origin of a thought, it stops being simply true and becomes something you can hold, examine, and bring to God. You cannot take a thought captive until you can see it.

MORNING REFLECTION · WEEK 2

Name one hard moment from this week. Write only the facts -- what a camera would have recorded. No story, no meaning, no interpretation.

Now write what you made it mean. What did you tell yourself about that moment, about the other person, about you?

What did that meaning produce in you -- what did you feel in your body, and what did you do next?

"The fact was hard enough. The story is what made it unbearable."

WALK ONE MOMENT THROUGH ALL SIX LETTERS

Use the same moment you named on the previous page. Move slowly. This is the whole practice.

R Reality -- What is actually, factually true? Just the facts -- one sentence.

O Origin -- Where is this coming from? What older wound, belief, or temperament pattern is feeding it?

O Overflow -- What is actually moving through me -- underneath the reaction? Name the real emotion.

T Turning -- What am I turning FROM? What is God inviting me TOWARD? (This is the hinge.)

E Election -- What is the one small, concrete, faithful thing I can choose right now?

D Dwelling -- Where am I resting? Am I abiding in the Vine or straining to produce fruit alone?

+ "Remain in me, as I also remain in you." -- John 15:4

THE TURN IS WHERE YOUR BRAIN CHANGES

Everything before the Turn is honest looking. The Turn is the moment of freedom -- the half-second where you notice the old groove and choose a different path. It will feel forced. It will feel like you do not believe it yet. Do it anyway. The Turn is an act of the will, not a feeling. You turn first; the feeling follows later, sometimes much later. Every single time you turn, you are laying down new track. That is what transformation actually is -- not a lightning bolt, but ten thousand small turns in the same direction.

What thought have you practiced so long it feels like simple fact -- but is actually just a well-worn groove?

What is the truer thing God would say about that same reality? Write it in His voice, not yours.

What makes that truer thought hard to believe right now? Name the resistance honestly.

THIS WEEK'S PRACTICE

Once a day, catch one moment. Run it through the six letters -- out loud, in your head, or on paper. It does not need to be a crisis; ordinary is better. You are not trying to fix your life this week. You are laying track. Show up daily and the path wears in.
